THE KARANKAWA NATION AFTER 1835; ITS DECLINE AND EXTINCTION. Dura post paullo fugies inaudax prcelia raptor. Before starting upon the narrative of the events which finally brought about the extinction of the nation which here occupies our attention, let us cast a glance upon the former historic facts in order to compass the extent of territory occupied by this people when still in its native, flourishing condition. HABITAT OF THE NATION. A promontory of the mainland in the West bay, fifteen miles southwest of Galveston city, Galveston county, is called Caronkaway point to this day. This was one of their fishing and stopping stations and also formed one end of the shallow ford which allowed them to cross over to the sand bar opposite in good weather. By this ford a party of theirs escaped at night when attacked by Lafitte s men...
