Excerpt: . . . sadder or more beautiful exists in India than the deserted city of Fathpur Sikri. There it stands, some twenty-three miles from Agra, much as it stood three hundred years ago, when Akbar decreed the stately pleasure-house. It was built to commemorate the blessing of the holy Salim Cliishti, the hermit who dwelt among the wild beasts in his cave at Sikri, and who had foretold that Akbars son, born on that spot, should live to succeed him on his splendid throne. The saint did not foresee that the infant would grow up into that unmitigated debauchee Jeliangir, whose orgies amazed Sir Thomas Roe and whose potent liquor caused that virtuous ambassador to sneeze incontinently, to the delight of the whole court. But the heroic toper did not defile his fathers palace city, which must have been deserted soon after its founders death; for when...
