Reviews

It is fantastic and great. It usually will not charge an excessive amount of. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

The furniture is mahogany except the bed, which is brass, and the carpet and the walls are done in blue. There is a door L., opening into the hall, and another at the L. of the back, up stage, opening into the bath room. To the R. back, up stage, is a practicable window, opening upon the street. This window has a shade and white lace curtains. To the R. is a door opening into a closet. At the C. back is the brass bed, the foot facing the audience, below which is a suit-case rack. To the L., down stage, from the door opening into the hall is a regular hotel writing desk (patented), with small chair in front of it. The desk has a drawer that pulls out, on which is a lid that can be raised up. There are pens, several varieties of stationery, telegraph blanks, ink, a penholder, blotter, etc. To the R., almost opposite the desk, but a little farther up stage, is the dresser. Upon it is the match holder with safety matches, the Bible placed, in this hotel by the Gideons, a pincushion with pins, needles, thread, a pants button, a pearl button or two, etc. At the window R., up stage, is a rocking-chair. To the other side of the window is a costumer. The shade at the window is drawn down. Over the bed is a picture of some scene from Shakespeare. On the writing desk is a picture of an old-fashioned New England home at twilight...
