BEFORE MANDELAS RAINBOW

Authorhouse. Hardcover. Book Condition: New. Hardcover. 238 pages. Dimensions: 9.3in. x 6.3in. x 0.9in. Loved and loving, indulged, even downright spoilt and at the heart of a migrant family whose forebears had sought a haven and livelihood in South Africa in the late 19th century, Edward Joffes memoir of his Johannesburg upbringing is not only a happy romp through the travails and adventures of childhood to adulthood but also a vivid window on 20th century life in a country of dramatic and often bitter contrasts. Acutely drawn characters people Eddies early life - from the bodybuilding Ash to the London Cockney Gran with her Boer War memories, from Aunt Minnie decorating every available surface with shells to the Marist Brothers College where the teachers are a cast of characters from some down market theatrical farce. There are happy times playing in the storeroom of Eddies - his fathers successful greengrocers - and on Joburgs koppies. Theres a Richmal Crompton Just William aura about Eddie and his chums. College and University life opens up a new seam of adventure - sexual and commercial - hilarious at times and poignant at others. A student tour of post-war Europe is so evocative of an era that this passage could stand alone as a record of its time. Again Eddies real talent for characterisation and description is to the fore. Not certain of a career path he dabbles in being an art dealer, a jewellery salesman, an advertising agent. . . . As a soundman he produced wedding recordings then goes on an Africa-wide adventure as writer director with an eccentric film producer and here a possible future career comes into view. However, there is a very moving and serious side to this story as Eddie becomes increasingly aware of the gulf - savagely...
